Annapolis, Md.. The writer asks the addressee not to write such mournful letters, as she is homesick enough. The writer will try to remain here until October, and then come home for good. Hears the Abolitionists "railed upon almost every day". A great friend of the writer thought it "a pity that they were not all strung up." The writer is quite a favorite with some who abuse the Abolitionists most, and it is perhaps fear of losing their good opinion that prevents her from telling them that she is also one. It is doubtful whether her telling them would do any good, and she might be sent home. The writer has been given what she has long wished for-the poems of Mrs. Felicia Dorothea Hemans. Describes acquaintances in Annapolis. Will soon be in the country, where she expects to be especially homesick.

Adams, Samuel, 1722-1803; governor of Massachusetts, and member of the Continental Congress.

To James Warren, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

[Baltimore.] Congress is now established in Baltimore. Had not realized the haste in removal so necessary, but later events showed that it had been most unwise to remain longer in Philadelphia. General Schuyler has written that the levies for troops are being handled very slowly in New England. Howe's troops are penetrating the whole country and England is attempting to raise still more forces in foreign countries. On hearing of Clinton's departure for Rhode Island, wrote to Washington with several other gentlemen and asked for General Gates or [redacted] to take command. Spencer and Arnold have been ordered [redacted]. Estimates the Russian force and comments on a vessel which had been seized. Mentions Captain Furze ? and his treachery. A.L.S. 4p. 8 x 6 1/4in.

To William Lloyd Garrison

«Baltimore» Disapproves of certain correspondence in the American, a local newspaper, between three colored ministers and a white man. Two of the ministers are not what they claim to be. They belong to the colored branch of the Methodist Episcopal Church, but they do not preside over any particular church. Their names are John Fortie, Nathaniel Peck and William Levington. Objects to these men stirring up trouble for the colored people in Baltimore. The trustees of the East Baltimore Station "abused the Abolitionists most shamefully," having been duped by a white clergyman. They are opposed to colonization.

Cherry-Grove, Md.: The writer tells about her life in the household of the Governor. "The children are very good natured but very poor scholars ... The Governor is a fleshy and jolly old man ... the house is full of company all the time." Reports an after-dinner conversation about free blacks slaves, and Abolitionists. "I felt rather bad ... but was forced to hear it, they said I suppose you have no slaves in Massachusetts ..." Tells of talk about a slave insurrection in Louisiana where one of the slaves was said to have a letter from Arthur Tappan, "urging him to the act." The writer will go (with the Governor's family) to Annapolis, where she expects to have a pleasant week "as far as balls and parties can make it." The writer thinks there is no danger of Cherry Grove, Md. The writer will go home in three months. The Governor is going to put the children (the writer's pupils) out to school. Reports two contradictory remarks by the Governor about John Quincy Adams, one that he "had better be at home he was an old fool," the other that he (the Governor) wished he "knew half as much as he does," adding that he was not an abolitionist. The writer repeats stories she has heard tell about Arthur Tappan and Maria Weston Chapman.
